If you are in some kind of job you must be wondering why it is necessary to do a business. I have also pondered over that for a long time. Business only is the solution to your dreams if you want to create an ever expanding source of wealth and provide you with the free time that you can live any way you want. Let us be blunt here. A job is a job. It requires you to be physically working. It might pay you handsomely or it might not but you need to be tied to that chair for a particular period. Typical problem with the job is “when you stop working your income stops. Moreover your job eats your time. How many times you wanted a leave but instead were rushing to your office. In your job you are working for somebody. All your labour is utilized to produce gains for the company you work. What do you get out of it? Just a monthly wage. Why do this when you can build a fortune with same amount of work or less. Business is the gateway to freedom. Be it financial freedom or freedom of time. You might be working 9 to 5 everyday and managing your family well but what about future. The figures say that 80% of people in job can hardly manage their finances after retirement. Therefore if you want freedom and security you must start a business and make it successful. If you want to stop worrying about payments and pay raises, business is the answer. Starting your own business is a wise decision. Invest time and money to build up your home business until it is profitable enough for you to become a full-time, self-employed person. Please do not get me wrong. Quite a number of people are happy with their jobs as long as they can keep one. They have a routine they like. They get up and leave for job, happily exhaust their brain and energies for achieving the goals of company and return home tired. Then they race against time to manage unmanageable household chores because job has left no time for that. They sacrifice their likings to manage the house and the kids by squeezing time from here and there. After all you cannot increase hours in a day. They get frustrated but continue because they have been brought up with the idea of that kind of lifestyle. Their job is a continuous fuel that runs their machinery. It is never enough but they learn to manage. To trap them further there are pay raises, promotions and bonuses. For most of them their job/work is kind of a burden. They can hardly wait for a weekend. That is the reason people wait for holidays eagerly. They are not content but they learn to live with discontentment. Poor Souls! They are oblivious to the fact that there are more ways to financial independence than the one they follow. Then there are other kinds who are not blinded by the job glare. These are the people who keep looking beyond their present shackles. They hate it when somebody orders them. They hate to get up at the dictated time and rush to the office. They can see their labor rewarding somebody else. These are the people who keep thinking about the financial independence and look for opportunity to get it. But hold on. Not all of them would be able to achieve what they dream. Because most of them are too insecure to take any action towards realization of the goals they have been thinking. They have the dream, they have the desire but they lack the fire to fuel that desire. Quite a number of them have become so accustomed to the security of the job that they won't move in spite of the knowledge and opportunity. A lot of people keep procrastinating and for them the day never comes. There is another group who starts but quits at the first sign of failure. Only few are willing enough to work harder to make it. You can be among those few. Are You? Then get going.....

It also evaluates the way teachers have used different diagrams to illustrate concepts in biology and chemistry. Next, the book explores the use of visual representations in culturally diverse classrooms, including the implication of culture for teachers' use of representations, the crucial importance of language in the design and use of visualizations and visualizations in popular books about chemistry. It also shows the place of visualizations in the growing use of informal, self-directed science education. Overall, the book concludes that if the potential of visualizations in science education is to be realized in the future, the subject must be included in both pre-service and in-service teacher education. It explores ways to develop science teachers' representational competence and details the impact that this will have on their teaching. The worldwide trend towards providing science education for all, coupled with the increased availability of color printing, access to personal computers and projection facilities, has led to a more extensive and diverse use of visual representations in the classroom. This book offers unique insights into the relationship between visual representations and science education, making it an ideal resource for educators as well as researchers in science education, visualization and pedagogy.

Since Dr. Brizendine wrote The Female Brain ten years ago, the response has been overwhelming. This New York Times bestseller has been translated into more than thirty languages, has sold nearly a million copies between editions, and has most recently inspired a romantic comedy starring Whitney Cummings and Sofia Vergara. And its profound scientific understanding of the nature and experience of the female brain continues to guide women as they pass through life stages, to help men better understand the girls and women in their lives, and to illuminate the delicate emotional machinery of a love relationship. Why are women more verbal than men? Why do women remember details of fights that men can't remember at all? Why do women tend to form deeper bonds with their female friends than men do with their male counterparts? These and other questions have stumped both sexes throughout the ages. Now, pioneering neuropsychiatrist Louann Brizendine, M.D., brings together the latest findings to show how the unique structure of the female brain determines how women think, what they value, how they communicate, and who they love. While doing research as a medical student at Yale and then as a resident and faculty member at Harvard, Louann Brizendine discovered that almost all of the clinical data in existence on neurology, psychology, and neurobiology focused exclusively on males. In response to the overwhelming need for information on the female mind, Brizendine established the first clinic in the country to study and treat women's brain function. In The Female Brain, Dr. Brizendine distills all her findings and the latest

Do you think you have a "bad memory"? Impossible, says Kevin Trudeau, the world's foremost authority on memory improvement training. There are no bad memories, only untrained memories. In order to release our natural memory, Trudeau says, we just need to learn to retrieve what we already know. As founder of the American Memory Institute, Kevin Trudeau has already helped more than one million people do just that. Each Mega Memory lesson in this book takes no more than thirty minutes per day and uses pictures, rather than the laborious word-association techniques of other memory systems, to activate our inborn memory. With this easy-to-follow system, you'll be able to instantly remember names, phone numbers, addresses, financial data, speeches, and schoolwork. Even better, Trudeau's system ensures instant recall and long-term Mega Memory. All you need is the desire to unleash your Mega Memory, and you can reap all these incredible rewards! Labeled with a learning disability at an early age, Kevin Trudeau was convinced his problem was an inability to recall information. He read everything he could on memory improvement. Eventually, he developed his own program for memory retrieval and formed the American Memory Institute. His Mega Memory home study system is the most utilized self-improvement series of all time.

Owing to its relatedness to parchment as the primary writing matter of the Middle Ages, human skin was not only a topic to write about in medieval texts, it was also conceived of as an inscribable surface, both in the material and in the figurative sense. This volume explores the textuality of human skin as discussed by Geoffrey Chaucer and other writers (medical, religious, philosophical, and literary) of the fourteenth and fifteenth century. It presents four main aspects of the complex relations between text, parchment, and human skin as they have been discussed in recent scholarship. These four aspects are, first, the (mostly figurative) resonances between parchment-making and transformations of human skin, second, parchment as a space of contact between animal and human spheres, third, human skin and parchment as sites where (gender) identities are negotiated, and fourth, the place of medieval skin studies within cultural studies and its relationship to the major concerns of cultural studies: the difficult demarcation of skin from body, the instability of any inscription, and the skin's precarious state as an entity of its own.

Choice! The key is Choice. You have options. You need not spend your life wallowing in failure, ignorance, grief, poverty, shame, and self-pity. But, hold on! If this is true then why have so many among us apparently elected to live in that manner? The answer is obvious. Those who live in unhappy failure have never exercised their options for a better way of life because they have never been aware that they had any Choices !
